Als die Dadaist*innen das Haus 1916 entdeckten, betrieb Jan Ephraim die Bier- und Weinschenke Holländische Meierei. Die Dadaist*innen bespielten den hinteren Saal und verpflegten sich mit dem Angebot der Meierei. Nach der Wiedereröffnung 2004 wurde das Sortiment mit einer Auswahl an Absinth erweitert. Die «grüne Fee» gilt als Lieblingsgetränk der Künstler*innen der Belle Époque (ca. 1884–1914). Van Gogh soll sich sein Ohr im Rausch abgeschnitten haben. Im historischen Cabaret Voltaire wurde das Getränk wahrscheinlich nicht serviert, da Absinth um diese Zeit bis 2005 verboten war. Wir wissen aber beispielsweise, dass Emmy Hennings sehr gerne Cognac trank.

When the Dadaists discovered the building in 1916, Jan Ephraim was running the beer and wine tavern Holländische Meierei. The Dadaists used the back room and supplied themselves with drinks from the Meierei. After the reopening in 2004, the assortment on offer was expanded with a large selection of absinthe. The «green fairy» is considered the favorite drink of the artists of the Belle Époque (ca. 1884–1914). Van Gogh is said to have cut off his ear while intoxicated. The drink was probably not served in the historic Cabaret Voltaire, as absinthe was banned around that time until 2005. But we know, for example, that Emmy Hennings was very fond of cognac.
